AMERICAN Revolution

Third Study of the SPANISH BORDERLANDS

PREFACE

In 1996, the authors became aware that neither the NSDAR (National Society for the Daughters of the American Revolution) nor the NSSAR (National Society for the Sons of the American Revolution) would accept descendants of Spanish citizens of California who had donated funds to defray expenses of the 1779-1783 war with England. As the patriots being turned down as suitable ancestors were also soldiers, the obvious question became: "Why base your membership application on a money contribution when the ancestor soldier had put his life at stake?" This led to a study of how the Spanish Army and Navy had worked during the war to defeat the English and thereby support the fledgling English colonies in their War for Independence. After a year of study, the results were presented to the NSSAR; and that organization in March, 1998, began accepting descendants of Spanish soldiers who had served in California. The acceptance is based simply on service during the time period of 1779-1783 while Spain was at war with England.

We had not by March, 1998, studied the organization of the Spanish Army in the Spanish Borderlands from Texas through California. We now know how the forces were deployed and used in an effort to unify the frontier and counter the influence of English or any other foreign forces. We know that orders going to California also went to Texas, New Mexico, Sonora, and all the other border provinces of Northern New Spain. In fact, the whole frontier and bordering provinces had been united in 1776 into a military command under a Commandante-General who reported directly to the King (or at least to his ministers). The Northwestern realm, with its unidentified border with England, was a continuing concern to the highest Spanish authorities, particularly to José de Gálvez, Minister of the Interior. During 1776 while the English Colonies were declaring Independence, he reorganized the military structure of the Provincias Internas; he authorized his nephew, Governor Bernardo de Gálvez of Louisiana, to begin clandestine help to the English Colonies; and he supervised the Anza Expedition to settle San Francisco Bay. He visualized that he could regain the Floridas, lost to Britain earlier; unify the whole northwestern frontier from the Mississippi River to the Pacific; and counter the British wherever they appeared.

Indeed, Gálvez' aims were partly accomplished. He did establish California and wipe out any historic English claims from the time of Sir Francis Drake. He did recover Florida. He made progress unifying the northern outposts, but there were not enough resources to do what he visualized. Indian tribes who were already on the vast land could not be incorporated into the Spanish way of life fast enough. Events in Europe intervened and took higher priority. So, in due course of time, the land from the Mississippi River to the Pacific became American rather than Spanish.

However, we still have the Americans of Spanish descent who fought to move the frontier forward to counter the British. They helped the English Colonies to become the United States of America. They held land in trust for future expansion of the United States. Both the NSDAR and NSSAR accept descendants of soldiers and sailors who served under Governor Bernardo de Gálvez. The NSSAR accepts descendants of soldiers and sailors who served in California. It has also accepted descendants of soldiers who had served in Texas and descendants of Texas cattlemen who drove cattle to Louisiana to support Governor Bernardo de Gálvez in his campaigns. Why not accept other Borderlands soldiers who served the same King, received the same orders, and fought and died trying to carry out the common strategy? That became our question.

Our first two books covered California. This third book covers Arizona, or at least the southern third of the state. This land was part of Pimería Alta in the Province of Sonora. It does not have a separate history as does New Mexico and Texas. Records are fewer and more scattered. Actually, Pimería Alta remained in Mexico until it was divided by the Gadsden Purchase into a Sonoran part and an Arizona part. Sonora had been very closely associated with California for a few years, and there was great hope that it would become a roadway to that area. Many Pimería Alta families have close blood ties with families who settled Northern California. However, any hopes for an overland route from Sonora to California were cut in 1781 when the Yumas rebelled and rejected Spanish culture. Pimería Alta became a forlorn frontier area ravaged by frequent Apache attacks. A few frontier soldiers and settlers hung on, and this book is their story.

1. WHY PATRIOTIC ORGANIZATIONS SHOULD ACCEPT DESCENDANTS OF SPANISH/MEXICAN SOLDIERS WHO SERVED IN THE SPANISH BORDERLANDS DURING THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

1. What would be the basis for acceptance?

Spain declared war on England 21 June 1779 and continued operations against England until peace was declared 3 Sep 1783. Spanish King Carlos III ordered his people to fight English forces wherever they were found. ("Royal Proclamation of His Majesty (Carlos III) in which He Manifests the Just Motives for His Royal Resolution of 21st of June of this Year (1779) Authorizing his American Vassals to Seek Amends by Way of Reprisals and Hostilities, on Land and Sea, Against the Subjects of the King of Great Britain," The SAR Magazine, Sons of the American Revolution, Vol XCI, #2 (Fall 1996):16-17.) This call was heard very clearly in North America, where the Spanish Borderlands of Louisiana and the Provincias Internas of New Spain faced English forces or claims along the Mississippi River, in the Gulf coastal areas, and along the northern borders of Texas through California. The normal procedure was for every Presidio to gather its troops in parade formation to hear read such Royal Orders as this declaration of war.

2. What period of time and what activities are involved?

The period of time from 21 June 1779 until 3 Sep 1783 is considered to be very definitive, that being the period any English force was to be attacked, as instructed in the King's Order. Actually, some activities began earlier, and the frontier areas did not learn of the end of the war until Spring, 1784.

PROVINCIAS INTERNAS. Activities common to all Provincias Internas of New Spain and Louisiana were service in the Spanish Army, service in the militia, service as Indian auxiliaries, making voluntary contributions to defray expenses of the War, and leading public prayers as mission priests. As the priests did not leave descendants, our interest is in locating and marking their graves as patriots. Voluntary contributions were certainly made, and amounts are known for CA, Sonora, NM, and Nueva Espana as a whole, but no general lists of contributors have been found to date. Until such lists are found, there is no easy way to define the patriots who contributed. This leaves those who served in the various forces as soldiers, militia, or Indian auxiliaries as the ancestral patriots for joining the Sons of the American Revolution.

CALIFORNIA. Activities relating to California are covered, pp 26-27, Granville W. and N. C. Hough, Spain's California Patriots in its 1779-1783 War with England - During the American Revolution, Part 1, 1998, SHHAR Press, P. O. Box 490, Midway City, CA 92655-0490.

ARIZONA. Activities relating to Arizona (and Sonora) include support for Anza's Expeditions to settle northern Alta California and secure San Francisco Bay in 1776; support for establishing the two Colorado river Mission/Pueblos in 1780; subduing the Seri Indians in 1781; support for Rivera's 1781 Expeditions to establish the Santa Barbara Presidio, the Channel Missions, and Los Angeles; support for punishing the Yumas after they destroyed the Colorado Mission/Pueblos in 1781-1783; participation in establishing a route from New Mexico to Sonora in 1780/81; and fighting the Apache Indians (every year). When the soldiers and settlers of Tucson were asked to contribute to the war effort, they contributed 459 pesos (or Spanish dollars, which were equivalent to American dollars at the time. Many historians simply refer to the contributions in dollars.) (Sonora's total contribution was 22,420 pesos, and that of New Spain, including all North Mexico and the frontier, was almost 1,000,000 pesos.)

NEW MEXICO. Activities relating to New Mexico include the 1779 Expedition into Colorado against the Comanches; subduing the Moquis (Hopis) in 1780; leading in establishing a trade route to Sonora in 1780-81; establishing relationships with the Navajos and Utes; campaigns against the Apaches; and making peace with the Comanches so that a trade route could be established to Texas and Louisiana. Citizens of New Mexico were asked to contribute to the war effort and did so, with $3677.00 collected. Lists of contributors have not been identified. New Mexico was the most remote province from any English installations, but it was the center of the frontier. Its Governor Juan Bautista de Anza was perhaps the foremost strategic thinker of the Northwestern Frontier, and he was personally involved in California, Arizona (Sonora), and New Mexico. His project to establish trade routes to Texas and Louisiana (San Antonio, Natchitoches, and St Louis) was successful after his retirement and death.

TEXAS. Activities relating to Texas include furnishing beef to Galvez' Army in Louisiana (1776-1783), protecting the province from the internal Indian threat (1779-1783), and probably making voluntary contributions to the war effort. No records for these contributions have been identified. It may be noted that the appointed Governor of Texas in 1779 was a Louisiana Patriot, Athanase de Mezieres, who arrived in San Antonio with a militia unit from Louisiana to bolster the San Antonio defenses. He had been a successful negotiator with Indian tribes, and he had been appointed governor partly because he believed he could negotiate with the Comanches and work through them to establish a trade route to New Mexico. Governor-designate de Mezieres died before he could take the office. Descendants of those who drove beef cattle to Louisiana to help Governor Galvez have been accepted by the NSDAR and by the NSSAR. The NSSAR has also accepted descendants of Spanish soldiers who served at San Antonio.

LOUISIANA. Louisiana activities are well known and descendants of its soldiers for the war period have long been accepted; however, some relationships to the Provincias Internas should be noted. One was the suggestion by the first Commandante General, Caballero Teodoro de Croix, that Col. Bernardo de Galvez of Louisiana bring 300 to 400 hunters (frontiersmen) from Louisiana to help him eliminate the Apaches. As he had known Bernardo de Galvez earlier in Nuevo Vizcaya, he knew this would be successful. However, de Galvez had already been appointed Governor of Louisiana and could not be spared. A second activity was the recommendation by Bernardo de Galvez in 1778 to his uncle, Josef de Galvez, on the superior merits of Louisiana's approach to handling hostile Indians to those of the Provincias Internas. When Bernardo de Galvez later became Viceroy of Nueva Espana, he put these recommendations into effect with good results. A third item was noted above in the support for appointing Athanase de Mezieres as Governor in Texas. Finally, after war started when Governor Domingo Cabello y Robles of Texas asked for permission to furnish livestock to support Galvez in Louisiana, he was encouraged to do so.

3. Where were the soldiers in the Spanish Borderlands?

About 300 soldiers were stationed in Alta and Baja California during the 1779-1783 period. They were assigned to the five Presidios of San Diego, Monterey, San Francisco, Santa Barbara, and Loreto.

About 100 soldiers were stationed at Tucson and Tubac in Alta Pimeria (Southern Arizona), backed up by about 200 soldiers in the Sonoran Presidios of Pitic, Fronteras, Altar, and Las Nutrias.

About 600 soldiers and militia were in New Mexico (and Nuevo Viscaya) taking part in the campaigns under Governor Juan de Anza. They were from the Presidios at Santa Fe, El Paso (Carrizal), Buenavista, Janos, and Elezario.

About 200 soldiers were in Tejas at the Presidios of La Bahia and San Antonio. The supporting Presidios and mobile units of Coahuila, Nuevo Leon, and Nuevo Santander were on or near the Rio Grande at Aguaverde, Monclovia, and El Presidio.

From time to time, militia units were formed from population centers; and they took part in campaigns. There were at least 500 persons in these units, but records are scanty. Indian auxiliaries were used in several campaigns as scouts or allies; and numbers are known but not many names of individual warriors. (The 1772 Regulations actually authorized each Presidio to have ten Indian scouts on the payroll. They were to serve as interpreters and trackers. As they were usually given Christian names, it is difficult to determine which soldiers were in this group.)

4. What is the NSSAR policy regarding applicants?

The SAR Constitution Article III states, with regard to eligibility, "... as a foreign national of, but not limited to, France, Germany, Poland, Spain, Sweden, or Switzerland who rendered service in the cause of American Independence..." The cause of American Independence was clearly served by Spain's financial support from 1776 onward and its 1779-1783 War with England. Descendants of Louisiana and California soldiers, and some Texas soldiers and citizens, are accepted. Supporting this acceptance is the record of the 1997 SAR visit to Spain to commemorate the support of King Carlos, Governor Bernardo de Galvez of Louisiana, and the church of Malaga in Spain. National Headquarters, NSSAR, has accepted the role of Spain as the major European power financing the war, and is willing to consider activities other than those commemorated in 1997. (Donald J. Pennell, "SAR Delegation Travels to Spain, England for Dedication of Plaques," The SAR Magazine, Sons of the American Revolution, Vol XCII #1, (Summer, 1997:12-14.)
Questions/Answers

(It has not been determined when the NSSAR began accepting descendants of Louisiana Patriots. It is known that Compatriot C. Robert Churchill, then President of the Louisiana Society of the SAR, in 1921 went to Seville, Spain, to research in the Archivo General de Indias for lists of Louisiana soldiers and militia who had served during the war period. He made five copies of his lists in 1925. Probably the NSSAR was accepting descendants soon after 1921. There is some indication that acceptance was considered several years before 1921 but was delayed because official rosters were not yet identified. Research in Spanish records was cut off by the terrible civil war in Spain during the 1930 decade and was not encouraged for Americans until the end of the Franco regime, a period of almost 50 years. American research now going on in Spanish archives and elsewhere is recovering much new information about Spain's part in the War with England.)

5. What is the NSDAR policy?

The policy of the Daughters of the American Revolution is of interest because female relatives of prospective SAR members want to join that organization. The DAR has published its policy regarding Spanish participation, and only descendants of soldiers in Galvez' army in Louisiana are accepted, but they are not accepted as soldiers. They have been accepted as "Louisiana Patriots" since 1925. Further, the period of acceptance has been extended back to 24 Dec 1776, before Spain was at war with England. Descendants of Texas citizens who drove cattle to Louisiana to support Governor Galvez have also been accepted as "Louisiana Patriots." The rationale which has been given for the curious "Louisiana Patriot" distinction is that Spain and the American Colonies never signed a formal alliance, that they never conducted joint operations with Americans, that Spanish soldiers did not serve under American commanders, and that Spain only entered the war as a result of her Bourbon alliance with France. (DAR Pamphlet, "Is That Service Right," NSDAR, March, 1995).

(It was not Spain's fault that there were no joint operations; but rather, Americans were unable to take part. Of course there were cases of cooperation: the role of General George Rogers Clark in working with the Spanish in the Siege of St Louis; the role of American privateers in Lake Pontchartrain during Governor Bernardo de Galvez' campaign against Manchac and Baton Rouge. Then there was the Yorktown campaign where it took Spanish finance from Cuba, a French fleet, and both French and American armies to bring that effort to a successful conclusion. As for the Bourbon Alliance, Benjamin Franklin, the American negotiator, surely knew that an alliance with France would inevitably bring in Spain as well; so no formal alliance was necessary with Spain. The nature of the Bourbon Alliance required either Spain or France to come to the aid of the other in case of war. (Vol 1:22, William Spence Robertson, The Life of Miranda, Chapel Hill, The University of North Carolina Press, 1929.)

Since 1925 the DAR has been accepting soldiers who did not serve under American officers or commanders, but they limited that service until recently to those who served in Louisiana. However, no Spanish soldier or sailor, whether in Louisiana, California, or elsewhere, enlisted in Spanish forces to establish the United States of America. All served their King; and when he declared war on England, they fought to defeat the English or any Indian forces which were hostile to Spanish interests. That their efforts against England and the Indian forces gave support to the American Colonies seems self-evident.

6. What is significant about the 1776 date used by the DAR?

The DAR quotes the 1776 order by Minister of the Indies Jose de Galvez to the Governor of Louisiana instructing him to support the Americans. (Eric Beerman, "The First Spanish Aid to the American Revolution," Daughters of the American Revolution, Magazine, Washington, DC, Vol 117:24, #1 (Jan 1983). This was part of his overall strategy to nullify English claims and block English advances all across North America. Earlier, as the king’s Visitor-General, he had orchestrated the settlement of Alta California to nullify the old English claims to Nova Albion, and to offset England’s mastery of the sea. Possibly to him, and certainly to Thomas Jefferson later, Louisiana was a territory from the Mississippi River to the Columbia River basin, where it joined Alta California. At the same time in 1776 when Galvez was giving instructions to the Governor of Louisiana, he was also working with his successors in New Spain to carry out his plan to fortify and settle San Francisco Bay.

7. Why did Spain really want to help the American Colonies?

Like France, Spain was governed by self-interest in support of the American Colonies. In neither was higher government’s love of liberty so strong that it governed policy. The Seven Years War had been disastrous for both countries, but more so for France, which was left practically bankrupt. In Spain, particularly, the memory of rivalry with England was strong. It went back to the sinking of the Armada and the depredations of English pirates on Spanish shipping, but the immediate recall was the loss of Havana and Manila to the English forces during the Seven Years War, which had ended in 1763. King Carlos III had considered his options and instituted the Bourbon reforms to revitalize his kingdom. Soon after 1763, King Carlos had sent his personal representative, Visitor-General Josef de Galvez, to carry out his reforms in New Spain. The American Revolution fitted into his resolution to counter the English wherever he could. Keeping the English occupied in the eastern colonies of America gave him opportunities to move in other areas, such as California and Louisiana.

8. What did Visitor-General Galvez do in New Spain?

First, Galvez reformed the military approach in the Northern part of Mexico, Texas, and Louisiana. He ousted the Jesuits from Baja California and replaced them with the Franciscans. He then began a major project to settle Alta California. He had an European’s appreciation of the sea power of England, and its long rivalry with Spain. He recognized the vulnerability of Spain’s Far Eastern trade, which had replaced gold and silver production as the main source of income and wealth for the Spanish crown. This trade came through Manila, and he knew very well the anguish of the Spanish authorities.
when the English had captured Manila and Havana. To get these ports back, Spain had traded England the areas of East and West Florida, which Spain had discovered and conquered 200 years before. Galvez wanted to have protection for the Manila galleons on the California shores before some other European power could settle there and threaten them. He remembered that in 1579 Francis Drake had refitted his ships at a bay in Alta California and had claimed the land for England as Nova Albion. Then, he also knew that Sir Francis Drake had sunk the Spanish Armada a few years later. Galvez began during the late 1760's the project of settling Alta California, first moving as far north of Acapulco as he could to build a new support port at San Blas. Then, as soon as he had built ships there, he was ready in 1769 to move forces to Alta California. By 1771, he had supervised the beginning forts and missions.

Having gotten Alta California started, Galvez turned his attention to other parts of the Northwestern frontier. He had a clear vision of a Spanish line of advance northward from newly acquired Louisiana to the Pacific Coast. What he found were isolated prongs of Spanish life far north of effective support. Presidios and pueblos were not arranged so they were mutually supportive, and each prong responded only to its own Provincial Governor. The Viceroy of New Spain was the first common authority over all, and this office was so far south that it was engulfed in local problems. The frontier was lowest priority. Galvez proposed three changes which were put into effect by King Carlos III in 1776: (1) separate the military and civil functions by putting all military actions under a Commandante-General of the Provincias Internas; (2) realign the Presidios so they would be mutually supportive; (3) move the military command center far to the north so it would remain focused on frontier problems. By the time these changes began in 1776, Galvez had become Minister of the Indies. He was already supervising from Spain two other supportive activities. First was Anza's Expeditions to settle San Francisco Bay and secure it from foreign incursions. Second was the secret agreement that Louisiana would be a focal area for clandestine support of the American Colonies in their War with England. So the strategy was clear. Nullify the English claims to the Pacific Coast, fortify the strategic ports, protect the Manila trade, consolidate the Spanish borderlands further north, stop the English at the Mississippi River, and recover the lost territory of East and West Florida. The fact that no English war fleet ever reached the Pacific Ocean during the War shows that the American, French, and Spanish efforts kept the English fully occupied in the Atlantic.

(In setting up support for the American Colonies, it was necessary to conceal Spain's role as Spain did not want to go to war with Portugal, an ally of England. Therefore, most of the support Minister of the Indies Josef de Galvez arranged was sent through French fronts, and France happily took credit for it. Historians now have better access to Spanish archives, and understand that the preponderance of supposed French support in money and materiel was actually from Spain. After Spain entered the war, she was better able to take credit for her support; but she soon found also that she had to support the French efforts in addition to the American ones. A particular case was the Siege of Yorktown, which combined Spanish financial aid from Cuba, the French fleet under Admiral de Grasse, and the combined French and American Armies. On his way to Yorktown, Washington stopped in Philadelphia and he and others drank toasts to the Americans, the King of Spain, the King of France, and especially to Admiral de Grasse (who could participate only after he had sufficient Spanish support.) (p 450, Benson Bobrick, The Triumph of the American Revolution, 1995). It took four tries to get everybody toasted.

9. So, why should Spanish Borderlands soldier descendants be accepted as SAR or DAR members?

It is just a matter of balanced and equal treatment. If Louisiana militia members from 1776 and other participants in Governor Bernardo de Galvez’ campaigns are accepted, and California soldiers and sailors are accepted, and Texas soldiers and contributors are accepted, it makes sense to accept other Borderlands soldiers. They were part of the same strategic plan of protecting Spanish interests and blocking the English, who, as Spain's greatest European rival, were gaining more power each year. Each Spanish action and campaign on its Northwestern Frontier Borderlands gained and held territory in trust for future U.S. expansion.

10. How many people will apply?

Some people have suggested there would be hundreds of people applying to each chapter. There is no reason to think descendants of Spanish soldiers would be more prone to apply than their counterparts whose ancestors served in the eastern colonies in American forces. With a beginning base of about 1500 soldiers, there might be a few members for each chapter in California, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, then a few scattered through other states. In five years there might be as many members as original soldiers, but this would require far more participation from this group than from any other colonial group from the Atlantic seaboard. (In 1999, there were 27,000 SAR members. Going back in time, the Revolutionary War itself had 290,000 participants. There is, therefore, roughly one SAR member for each 10 Revolutionary War participants.) That perhaps represents the number of men willing and able to trace their ancestors back to 1776. If descendants of soldiers who served in the Borderlands know their ancestry better, they might respond with a higher ratio.

11. Who will be eligible?

Of the 1500 plus soldiers and militia who were in service between 1779 and 1783, we know families for less than half. Descendants of these families are the ones who will be eligible. The other soldiers either did not marry or we do not know their families.

12. What references will applicants use for establishing soldier service?

We have enlistment records and rosters for most Presidios, and in a few cases we have census or other records for 1779 through 1783. The applicants will generally include these records with their applications.

13. What other references will applicants use?
Questions/Answers

Draft lists of the references an applicant may want to study to determine his ancestry or how his own ancestors fitted into the historical activities have been prepared for each state. States currently available on request from the authors are California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana and Florida. (See an example, pp 148-154 ahead, "References for Descendants of Spanish Soldiers Who Served in Arizona and the Spanish Borderlands During Spain's 1779-1783 War with England."

SARSPQ2, ZIP, 30 May 1999.
2. THE SPANISH BORDERLANDS DURING THE ERA OF SPAIN'S 1779-1783 WAR WITH ENGLAND

A. PRESIDIOS

Herbert E. Bolton once stated the Spanish frontier stretched from Saint Augustine, Florida, to San Francisco, California, along the present southern and western borders of the continental United States. He then listed the forts, or Presidios, which protected that continuous border as San Agustin, Apalache, Pensacola, Los Adaes, La Bahia, San Antonio, San Saba, El Paso, Sante Fe, Janos, Fronteras, Terrenate, Tubac, Altar, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Monterey, and San Francisco. (Herbert E. Bolton, "The Mission as a Frontier Institution," The American Historical Review, Vol XXIII, No. 1 (1917), pp 42-61. This comment on the Presidios is on page 53.) While it happens this was a good way to dramatize the Spanish situation in general, these Presidios did not all exist at the same time, nor were they mutually supportive.

The Presidios were actually in isolated geographical jurisdictions, each bound by its chain of command to await orders from central authorities in Mexico or Spain before taking action. In time, they did receive identical orders on how to proceed on general actions, such as making war on England, or in collecting funds for defraying expenses of the war with England. All were at the end of the communication links with Mexico and Spain, and they generally got news six months to one year after the event.

The Pacific Coast cluster of San Diego, Santa Barbara, Monterey, and San Francisco were supported by the Presidio of Loreto in Baja California and the Naval Department at San Blas. Had Bolton been more interested in naval history, he might have added the Presidio at Nootka, or the naval explorations up to Alaska. He did note that California had been briefly supported from Sonora (1774-1781) until the Yuma Indians closed that overland route.

The next group of Presidios were those of the Sonoran Desert, west of the Sierra Madre and along the east coast of the Gulf of California. These included the Presidios of Sonora and Arizona listed by Bolton as Tubac, Fronteras, Terrenate, and Altar. For a brief time, it seemed that Sonora would become the support base for California, but this did not work out because of the Yumas. Soldiers from Sonoran Presidios of Tucson, Pita, Horcasitas and Buenavista were active in campaigns against the Yumas along with California Presidios. Afterwards, there was an effort to develop a commercial trade route with New Mexico, but it did not work out either. Tucson (replacement for Tubac) and Las Nutrias (replacement for Terrenate), and the Nueva Vizcaya Presidios of Carrizal and Elizario were active in this exploratory effort. Sonora and Alta Pimeria remained an isolated northward prong making little and slow progress against the Apache Indian onslaughts. Backing up the Sonoran frontier was the province of Sinaloa, with more people and resources.

The third group of Presidios were those of the Chihuahuan desert, the great broken central plateau of Northern Mexico through New Mexico to Colorado. The border Presidios of Santa Fe and El Paso were backed up by those of Nueva Vizcaya including Janos, San Buena Ventura, Guajioquilla/San Elizario, Julimes, La Junta de los Rios (Presidio, TX), and Cerro Gordo (Villa Hidalgo, Durango). There was also a road guard position north of El Paso planned for Robledo but later moved to another location. Chihuahua was the great trade center for this area. During the War with England, one of the key figures of this area was the Governor of New Mexico, Lt Col Juan Bautista de Anza, who had previously opened the overland Sonora-California route. He led in establishing a commercial route to Sonora, but it did not compete with the established trade route to Chihuahua. He also set the stage for later trade contacts and routes with Texas. His greatest wartime successes were in subduing the Comanches, the Moquis (Hopi), and the Navahos.

The fourth cluster of Presidios were those of Texas and the bordering Mexican states whose routes followed the curve of the Gulf of Mexico. Bolton mentioned San Antonio, La Bahia (Goliad), and San Saba. Backup Presidios were mainly on the Rio Grande and further south. San Saba was moved to the Rio Grande and became Aguaverde. Others on or near the Rio Grande were Santa Rosa (near the confluence of San Rodrigo River with the Rio Grande), Monclova (near the confluence of San Diego River with the Rio Grande), and San Juan Bautista (Villa de Guerrera, Coahuila, across from Eagle Pass). There was also a road guard outpost in Texas at Tawakoni crossing on Cibolo Creek. (Los Adaes Presidio had belonged to an earlier effort to establish Texas. It was at the present site of Robeline, LA, near Nachitoches. It had been the official capital of Texas until 1773, when East Texas had been abandoned.)

These four separate clusters of Presidios were all part of the Provincias Internas and had most of the time a common military commander, the Commandante General of the Provincias Internas, covered below. Regular Army officers commanded the Presidios and supporting forces: those in Sonora, Texas or New Mexico were sometimes assigned to California; and California officers sometimes went to Sonora or Sinaloa. The Presidial troops, however, were typically local and married and were not transferred as readily as officers or the Regular Army troops such as the Catalonian Volunteers who had come from Spain.

The three eastern Presidios, San Agustin, Apalache, and Pensacola, on the east end of the chain were those of East and West Florida which were lost to Spain in the settlement of the War of 1763. When they were recovered during the 1779-1783 War with England by Governor Bernardo de Galvez of Louisiana, they were not placed under the same military jurisdiction as the Presidios of the Provincias Internas further west. Nor was Louisiana in that jurisdiction. Their chain of command went through the Captain-General at Havana, Cuba.

B. PROVINCIAS INTERNAS.

While the Visitor-General Josef de Galvez was in Northern New Spain analyzing the frontier defense problems, he could see that the Presidios were not in optimal positions, that the chain of command was slow and awkward, and that the fighting capability of the Presidios was quite limited. He proposed three major changes, which King Carlos III put into effect in 1776, but he left other problems unsolved.

1. Separate the military and civil functions by putting all the military functions under a Commandante-General of the Provincias Internas. This improved many aspects of the frontier defense, but it did not give the Commandante-General any new access to resources. The Viceroy of New Spain still determined the overall priorities and could make or break the work of the Commandante-General.

2. Realign the Presidios so they were more nearly mutually supportive. Several Presidios were actually moved, but the settler families they left behind were soon victims of Indian attacks. Sometimes the new locations were successful, as at Tucson, but others were returned to their old locations.

3. Move the military command center far to the north. The town selected was Arispe, in Sonora. It was at the time at the most important strategic point, the closest town to the strategic Colorado passage to Alta California. It had little other advantage. It was actually harder for TX and NM to send messages to Arispe than to the Viceroy. Sometimes the messages had to go south from or to Arispe, then back north.

Two perennial problems not addressed by the changes were those of supply for the Presidios, and the arms and equipment for individual soldiers. The supply system was set up so that a Presidio Commander could become wealthy at the expense of his command. As for arms, the Presidial soldier had little that had not been copied from those used 300 years earlier against the Moors in Spain. It is a wonder that the Presidial forces held the line as well as they did.

The actions of the Commandantes-General had significant effects on the results. The first to hold the office, Caballero de Croix, first inspected the entire frontier from TX to CA. He held meetings with Presidio Commanders, where they jointly and severally analyzed their defense problems. One interesting thing which el Caballero found was that about 30% of all soldiers were guarding their caballada (horse herds). Experience had taught the Commanders that you either guarded your herds, or the Indians took them. Further, soldiers were expected to carry the mail, provide escort for visitors, and punish those who raided the pueblos or ranchos. Home guard remaining at a Presidio typically included one or two officers, soldiers who were sick, invalids, or retired, and a few of the least experienced soldiers. The Presidios were overcommitted.

When Commandante-General de Croix recognized that each Presidio was overcommitted in its own area, he set up flying companies which could be sent to any part of the frontier. He also bolstered the militia and set up Indian Auxiliary units of Opata and Pima Indians. These units were paid by Spain and had Regular Army Spanish officers. Though mounted, they first fought with bows and arrows, but were gradually armed as their services became dependable. De Croix also fostered alliances with friendly Indian tribes and encouraged them to attack other Indian tribes who were raiding the Spanish areas.

C. MISSIONS

Except for Alta California, the missionary thrust into the Borderlands was made by the Jesuits. There were more abandoned Jesuit missions than new ones established by other orders. When the Jesuits were expelled in 1767, the Franciscans took over, with the Dominicans replacing Franciscans in Baja California in 1769.

The Missions were established near existing Indian rancherias, or at places where agriculture and self-sufficiency were possible. The idea was that in ten years, the Indians could be converted to Christianity and settled into village farming near the missions. They could then also support the priests and the local Spanish population. This did not work out very well, and some Indian groups were not fully converted after 100 years. What did happen is that European diseases were introduced, and the Indian population died away. Smallpox was one of the most effective killers of Indians, and the Indians of Texas rancherias made a direct connection of smallpox to the appearance of the black-robed Jesuits. When the Jesuits baptized Indian children, the parents expected them to die of smallpox. (Indeed, medical ignorance about smallpox was so great that Jesuits may inadvertently have carried the disease to the Indian villages.) Other childhood diseases were almost as effective killers as smallpox. What the Indians were unable to do under the missions was to move away to cleaner areas and new food sources as they had traditionally done.

When the Indians died out or moved away in fear, more and more Mexicans took over the land near the missions. Another gradual transition was the use of Spanish-sounding names by the Hispanicized Indians. The priests gave every baptized child a saint's name, though the child may not have been used this name except in church records. We do know that some did adopt their church name. In a California example, a person was shown on his birth record to be Indian. When he enlisted, he was mestizo. Later, when he became a rancho owner, he was Spanish. In no case could he read and write, so the record is how others perceived his social status. Now this does create a problem for genealogists trying to sort out church records or family traditions. Another confusing factor is that Spanish families who were members of the church were obligated to sponsor Indian neophytes and the children of neophytes in birth, marriage and confirmation. This established lasting relationships between some Spanish and Indian families, with Indian children taking the names of their sponsors or living with their sponsors if their own parents died.

What the missions did best was to introduce the Indians to new crops, livestock, and new ways of thinking about making a living. They weaned the Indians away from traditional hunting and gathering into dependence on year-round agriculture and living in one given area near the missions. In fact, everyone in the Spanish culture had a village where he was expected to live and no one changed their villages without permission. So, Indians who left their missions were hunted down by the Presidial soldiers and returned, where they were punished by the soldiers, as directed by the priests.
Eventually, some Indians did become good Christians and did very well as long as the mission fathers could intervene for them in affairs of state. When the missions were secularized, the Indians lost out to the Spanish or Mexicans. In general, this happened in the nineteenth century; but taking over the best Indian land was a common practice in all Border areas from the beginning, whether by the missions, presidios, or ranchers protected by the presidios. It should be noted that the missions of the AZ, NM, and TX were not as wealthy in land or property as were those of Alta California. The priests depended on gifts and gratuities for their existence, rather than food and livestock from their own mission lands.

The operating missions and visitas in the 1779-1783 time era included:

Alta Pimeria/Sonora (under Franciscans from Queretaro): In the Santa Cruz River basin in AZ were San Xavier del Bac (Tucson), Tubac, Tumacacori, Calabasas, Guevavi, and in Sonora were Bocoancos, Buenavista, Santa Barbara, Santa Maria de Suanca, and Santa Cruz. Other visitas in AZ were Quiburi on the San Pedro River, Casa Grande, and Arivaca. On the Rio Altar in Sonora were San Ignacio de Caborca, San Diego del Pitiquito, Altar, San Antonio de Oquitoa, Atit, Santa Teresa, San Pedro y San Pablo de Tubutama, Saric, Busanic, Tucubavia, Arizona, and Planchas de Plata. On the Rio Magdalena in Sonora were Santa Ana, Magdalena, San Ignacio de Caborica, Imuris, and Nuestra Señora de Concepcion de Caborca, and Nuestra Senora Guadalupe de Cocospera. On the San Miguel River in Sonora were Cosari (Dolores), and Cucurpe. The two missions on the Colorado, La Purisima Concepcion and San Pedro y San Pablo, were also under jurisdiction of the Sonoran Franciscans.

New Mexico (under Franciscans from Queretaro): The missions upstream from Santa Fe were Tesuque, Nambe, Pojoaque, San Ildefonso, Santa Cruz de la Canada, San Juan, Picuries, San Jeronimo de Taos, Santa Clara (west of river), Albiqiiu (west of River). Those downstream from Santa Fe were Santo Domingo, Sandia, Albuquerque, Cochiti, San Felipe, Santa Ana, Zia, Jemez, Laguna, Acoma, Zuni, Isleta, Pecos, and Galisteo. Santa Fe included Church and Convent of St. Francis, House of the Governor, Chapel of Our Lady of Light (Presidio), Church of St Michael, Pueblo of Analco, and villa districts of Quemado, Cieneguilla, Cienega Grande, and Rio de Tesuque. The El Paso area was under Nueva Vizcaya, but it included El Paso del Norte, Ysleta, Guadalupe, San Lorenzo, and Socorro del Paso.

Texas (under Franciscans): San Francisco de la Espada, San Juan Capistrano, San Jose y Miguel de Aguayo, Nuestra Senora de la Purisima Concepcion de Acuna, San Fernando.
Cathedral, Corpus Cristi de la Ysleta, Nuestra Senora del Socorro, San Francisco de los Tejas, Nuestra Senora de la Guadalupe de los Nacogdoches, Nuestra Senora de los Dolores de los Ais, San Antonio de Valero, Mission de las Cabras, Espiritu Santo de Zuniga, Nuestra Senora del Rosario, San Saba, Nuestra Senora del Refugio, San Antonio de Valero (the Alamo). Missions in border areas of Coahuila included San Juan Bautista and San Francisco Solano. Missions in border areas of Nuevo Santander included Laredo, Mier, Camargo, Reynosa, Revilla, Santa Rosa, San Ildefonso, and Jose de Escandon.

Louisiana missions and churches were developed under the French and had different relationships to civil authorities than did the Spanish missions.

Florida missions included St Augustine, Pensacola, and others not yet studied.

D. PUEBLOS AND RANCHOS.

The traditional Spanish method of moving into new areas included three interrelated activities of Presidios, Missions, and Pueblos. As far as New Spain was concerned, the first pueblos were mining towns, established wherever gold, silver, mercury, or other good ores were found. Later, to support these towns, agriculture was established both by the missions and by other settlers, either in pueblos or in ranchos.

By the latter half of the 18th century, most of the readily available ore deposits had been exploited, and the Borderlands had settled down to agriculture and missions as the sustaining forces for population development. The Presidios were absolutely necessary to protect these efforts.

Where there was a large Indian population associated with a mission, a pueblo would be established among them as a support for the mission and as a protection against other Indian raiders. (What we call the Pueblo Indians is the result of Spanish explorers finding the elaborate mud villages of the Tewa, Moqui (Hopi), and other tribes along the Rio Grande and elsewhere in New Mexico and Arizona. To the Spanish, these villages were Pueblos and were so designated. Some of these villages organized under Spanish rule into legal Spanish Pueblos, with their own governors.)

When enough people of Spanish culture gathered to work or to mine ore, or enough neophyte Indians congregated near a mission, a legal Spanish Pueblo could be established, with its own alcade (mayor or leader) and cabildo (governing body). The able-bodied males of the pueblo made up the militia. These pueblos were not permanent, and could disappear when ore sources dried up, or when Indian raiders forced withdrawal.

In the Californias, the pueblos by 1800 were Loreto, San Jose, Los Angeles, and Branciforte (which did not survive). Stock raising and agriculture developed with the Missions, using Indian labor. The missions took over the land surrounding them for their own use and discouraged others from competing with them in supplying the Presidios. San Jose and Los Angeles were settled in the hope that they would develop agriculture and increase regional self-sufficiency. Gradually they did this, but the great California ranchos developed after 1800 when retiring soldiers moved away from the pueblos and developed their own operations.

In Arizona (Pimeria Alta), the only pueblo was Tucson, but there had probably been temporary pueblo organizations previously at Tubac, Tumacacori, Arivaca, San Xavier, and at other larger missions. These probably all fell after Apache attacks. While stock-raising was introduced by the early Jesuits before 1750, it suffered a setback during the Pima revolt of 1751. Later, it gradually developed with the missions and presidios, but the few large ranches of Arizona were all developed after 1800. By 1850, most had been abandoned because of Apache attacks. The rights to the land were bought up from the heirs by moneyed interests from California and other areas. Further south in Sonora, which included Sinaloa, the land was gradually removed from Indian control and settled.
In 1783, the Sonora census prepared for Caballero Teodoro de Croix showed there were 47,077 people under Spanish control.

New Mexico was the most advanced and self-sufficient of the Northwestern frontier Borderlands areas. It was settled first in the early seventeenth century and had by 1779 Santa Fe, Santa Cruz de la Canada, Taos, Queres, Zandia, Albuquerque, Laguna, and Zuni. Of course, the Indian Pueblos had been there for hundreds of years. Agriculture and stockraising were well developed in New Mexico. El Paso had been settled from New Mexico after an Indian uprising there had demolished the first settlements and had sent the survivors south as refugees. After the reconquest of New Mexico in 1680, many of the El Paso families returned north to reclaim their lands. Other new settlers joined from far to the south, and New Mexico developed as the most northern thrust of Spanish settlement. New Mexico was an area of small family holdings rather than large land grants. Sheep were important in New Mexico agriculture, and it was the only Borderlands province with that emphasis. The pueblos and villas furnished much of their own protection through well-organized militia units. It has been estimated that over 1500 militia served during the 1770 and 1780 decades, with expenses paid locally.

Texas, as then understood, was what we now would call East Texas. Before 1800, there were only a few places which might be called pueblos. San Antonio and Nacogdoches were two which survived. Another, called Bucareli, failed. The part of West Texas we now call the El Paso area, was under New Mexico or Nuevo Vizcaya during the 18th century. The southern part of Texas, south of the Nueces River, was in the province of Nuevo Santander, and in the 1783 time period, it contained more Spanish people than the area called Tejas/Texas. By 1800, Nuevo Santander had 15,000 people, three or four times the number in Texas. It did indeed have several viable pueblos, on both sides of the Rio Grande, and these survive today as Loredo, Mier, Camargo, Reynosa, and Revilla. Each of these contributed descendants to the present population of Texas and other states. Stock raising was the major activity of the families who settled this area. While most of their grants of land were large in acreage, they were not large relative to the water and forage available and the number of livestock being raised.

After the Spanish took over the area of Louisiana in 1763, they took over towns and fortified places developed under French culture. These included New Orleans, which expanded greatly under Spanish rule, Nachitoches, Arkansas Post, St. Louis, and other towns. The focus of upper Louisiana was on fur trade with the Indian tribes along the Ohio, Illinois, Mississippi, and Missouri Rivers, and their tributaries. The focus of Lower Louisiana was on trade with Cuba and Europe.

Everything east of the Mississippi River was ceded to England in 1763 as West and East Florida, and it was the major effort of the Governor of Louisiana, Bernardo de Galvez, to get them back after Spain declared war on England in 1779. The pueblos or populated areas included Baton Rouge, Natchez, Mobile, Pensacola, and St Augustine. These areas, being under English rule, had militia units which were aligned against the Spanish until the tide was turned. The areas along the Mississippi River (Natchez and Baton Rouge) were agricultural, while Pensacola and St Augustine were focused on trade. Both these areas had considerable traffic with the Muskogean Indian tribes of Creeks, Choctaws, and Seminoles.

3. THE ARIZONA/SONORA TIME LINE AND ACTIVITIES

Certain of the strategic activities taken by Spain in its efforts to block and prevent English expansion started well before the English Colonies on the East Coast began their fight for Independence. For convenience, the time line will begin in 1775, at the same time English Colonies began their struggle with England on the East Coast. At that time, Alta California had been partially occupied to prevent England, or any other foreign power, from settling it. However, it was very expensive to keep the missions and presidios stocked with survival goods. There was great interest in establishing a link with Sonora, which would be easier and cheaper for supporting Alta California. The question was: Can it be done? The players in the drama of answering this question were later participants in Spain's War with England.

A. Anza Expeditions, 1774-75. Anza's First Expedition to California established that it was feasible to go from Sonora to California if one selected the season most suitable for crossing the desert. Anza was given the authority and resources to carry out the major strategic objective of settling San Francisco Bay area before any foreign power, such as England, could get to it. Some of the participants in this expedition remained in service into the War with England.

1775-76. Anza's Second Expedition to California carried 240 people, with supporting livestock and equipment, through to Monterey and on to San Francisco. Anza had recruited the families from Alta Pimera, Baja Pimeria, and as far south as Sinaloa. The Californianos of Northern California thus share family and cultural ties with families of Sonora and Alta Pimeria. Some of the soldiers with this Expedition returned to Sonora and later settled at Yuma or became members of the soldier escort there.

B. Tucson Presidio Established, 1775-76. The Expeditions to California showed how important the safety for the Gila River route to the Colorado had become. The Presidio at Tubac was moved 50 miles north to Tucson, so that it could give better protection against the Apaches and to those using the Gila River route. The Tubac Garrison of 1775 became the founding Tucson Garrison. Tubac civilians moved with the garrison, and some were later settlers at Yuma. So it may be said that Tucson was established as part of an overall strategic plan to occupy California and protect the overland passage to it. Members of the Tucson Presidio are identified in Chapter 8A below.

C. Terrenate Presidio in Arizona, 1775-80. At the same time the Tubac Presidio was moved to Tucson, Terrenate Presidio was moved northward on 10 Dec 1775 to a position on the San Pedro River not far from present-day Tombstone, AZ. There it stayed for just over four years, exposed and under incessant Apache attack. Casualties were so high that the Presidio was moved southward to Las Nutrias in early 1780. Presidial troops had been partially replaced by the Second Free Company of Catalonian Volunteers, whose Commander was Lt Col Pedro Fages. Some of the soldiers who served later at Las Nutrias or in other places are listed in Chapter 9B, below.
D. Spain Declares War on England, June 1779. King Carlos III of Spain declared war on England, and copies of his order were sent to every Presidio and Pueblo in his domain. It was likely late 1779 or early 1780 before the news reached Sonora and subsequently Alta Pimeria.

E. The Yuma Mission Settlements, 1779-81. The overland passage from Sonora to California had one critical area, the Colorado River crossing, which was controlled by the friendly Yuma Indians. In order to consolidate the ties of the Yumas to the Spanish, Anza proposed that a Presidio be established at the crossing area, with the usual supporting missions. After some delay and funding problems, this proposal was watered down to establishing two fortified missions, with ten soldier families and several other families with each mission. This was finally carried out in 1779 and 1780, but the settlers arrived too late to plant crops and became a burden to the Yumas and their food supplies. The Yumas had become disillusioned by 1781.

F. War with Seri Indians, 1780-81. The Seri Indians of the mountains of Sonora, never friendly with the Spanish, rose up in rebellion and had to be put down. They endangered the roads from Sinaloa to the Colorado. They were overpowered by a force which included the Catalanian Volunteers under Lt Col Pedro Fages. It thus happened that this force was available in the area when it was learned that the Yumas had also revolted.

G. Requests for Donations, 1780. On 17 August 1780, King Carlos III of Spain, to defray expenses of the War with England, requested voluntary donations from each of his male subjects over the age of 18, 2 pesos per Spaniard, and 1 peso per Indian. News of this request probably reached Sonora in 1781 and was acted on in August, 1781. Collections then continued in Sonora until they were finally stopped in 1786. Commandante-General Felipe de Neve had stopped the contributions in New Mexico in April, 1784, soon after he knew the war was over. The collections later made in Sonora were likely those of promises made at the time of first solicitation. As in California, the amounts contributed are known, but the names of individual contributors have not been found.

H. Moqui Expedition, 1780. During this period of time, New Mexico has jurisdiction over what is now Northeastern Arizona, as it had long had contact with the Moqui (Hopi) and Navajo tribes. The Moquis had rejected the Spanish ever since the 1680 uprising, but in 1780, they were starving from the severe drought. Lt Col Anza believed he could get them to accept Spanish rule and he led an expedition into their country in late 1780. He was able to get some to return with him to New Mexico to survive, but most refused. They were so decimated from the drought that they were never again a threat to the Spanish. The names of the soldiers and militia who participated in this expedition have not all been recovered.

I. Trade Routes for New Mexico, 1780-81. The overall strategic plan was to unite the provinces of the northern frontier. New Mexico, in particular, wanted trade routes and markets for its products, either to Texas or to Sonora. Lt. Col. Anza led an expedition from New Mexico to Tucson, establishing that a trade route was feasible. He was joined in this exploration by contingents from Sonora and from Nueva Vizcaya. New Mexico could now envisage trade with California along the new trails being developed. Lt. Col. Anza then worked on other trade routes to St Louis, Nachitoches, and San Antonio. These were developed after Lt Col Anza left NM. The trade routes are discussed below, pages 30 to 33.

J. Rivera’s 1781 Expeditions. 1781. Part of the strategic plan for securing Alta California was to establish another Presidio at Santa Bárbara, establish Channel missions, and establish a second Pueblo at Los Angeles. The Expedition for these objectives was headed by Captain Rivera and was in two parts. The first part crossed from San Blas to Baja California, then moved up the peninsula to Mission San Jose. The second part moved north from Sinaloa through Sonora to the Colorado, which it reached in June, 1781. The families from this group were sent on to San José, while Capt Rivera and several soldiers stayed with the livestock at the Colorado, allowing them to fatten up on the beans and other supplies the Yumas depended on for winter sustenance. This was more than the Yumas could stand.

K. Yuma Massacre, 1781. In July, 1781, the Yumas rose up in rebellion and killed all the priests and most of the soldiers and male settlers of the mission settlements. They also killed Capt. Rivera and his contingent of soldiers, capturing all of the livestock intended for California. The names of those involved are listed below/pages 24 to 29.

L. Yuma Campaign, 1781. The first campaign by Lt Col Pedro Fages was able to contact the Yumas and ransom most of the captive wives and children. They were not able to subdue the Yumas, so Lt Col Fages was sent to California to gain help. By the time he arrived in California, the Colorado River was in flood stage and the campaign had to wait until Fall, 1782. This time it was led by Lt Col Felipe de Neve from California.

M. Tucson Presidio Fight, 1782. The Apaches were well aware of what was going on in the Colorado River affair, and they knew the Presidios were weakly guarded. They became very bold and resolved to wipe out the Tucson Presidio. With over 200 warriors, they attacked on 12 May, 1782 and almost overcame the defenders. After an incredible defense by the few garrison members present, the Apaches withdrew. Eleven soldiers who were commended for their conduct in this fight were still in service in 1783.

N. Yuma Campaign, 1782. Combined forces from Sonora and California moved against the Yumas in the Fall of 1782; however, they were unable to corner the Yumas or cause them to fight. They burned all the villages they could find and returned to their Presidios. Names of those who participated in this campaign have been partially recovered, and it included soldiers from both California and Sonora Presidios.

O. Apache Attacks, 1779-1784. Commandante-Generals de Croix and Felipe de Nève were constantly harassed by news of Apache raids and killings. The Apaches kept spies among the other tribes who kept them informed of opportunities for raids and they followed through. No area was safe. No horseherd (caballada) was secure enough to prevent capture. As the Apaches had lived by raiding for many generations, there was no way to stop them by treaty. To the Apaches, they either raided or starved. Thus, the Apaches were the local enemy of the Spanish, not English forces. The names of those killed or who fought as local militia against the Apaches are not all known.

P. End of War with England, 1784. Commandante-General Felipe de Neve became aware of the end of the War with England by Jan, 1784, as indicated by his correspondence with Governor de Anza of New Mexico. It is certain he also notified his other governors at the same time. Actually, ending the war with England had no effect on the Apache threat, though it could give hope that more resources would become available to the Northwestern frontier.

Q. Navajo-Apache Relationships, 1780-83. Lt Col de Anza, Governor of New Mexico, worked diligently to separate the Navajos from their close Athabascan cousins, the Apaches. He was able to get the Navajos to stop their open support for the Gila River Apaches and to renounce the Apache tribal ways. The Navajos gradually became more hispanicized and dependent on Spanish trade. This helped in the 1784 campaign against the Apaches.

R. Apache Campaign, 1784. Commandante General Felipe de Neve mounted an all-out offensive against the Western Apaches in 1784 which was partially successful in keeping them quiet for a few years. Actually, only 68 Apaches were killed and 17 captured. Names of Spanish participants should include many who had previously served during the War with England; however, these names have not been recovered. This campaign was the greatest effort made by de Neve: but he died unexpectedly while it was underway.

S. Tubac Presidio Re-established, 1783-85. The Tubac area was too far away from Tucson to be readily defended, and the numerous Pima and Papago rancherias of the Tubac/Tumacacori area were frequently raided by the Apaches. Some soldiers were placed in the old Presidio buildings as early as 1783, and the Presidio was re-established by 1785 with Pima and Papago soldiers. Those who served in the early garrison years had probably had some previous wartime service as militiamen or auxiliaries. Some of them are listed in Chapter 8B, below.

4. YUMA PARTICIPANTS

The combined mission-pueblos among the Yumas near the junction of the Gila and Colorado Rivers were established in late 1780 from Sonora and Pimería Alta. La Purísima Concepción was first established, and shortly the second, San Pedro y San Pablo, followed a few miles away. For many reasons, the Yumas believed they were being victimized and rose up in rebellion in July 1781. They killed priests, settlers, and soldiers from the two settlements, then killed those who remained with Captain Fernando Javier de Rivera y Moncada from the great Expeditions of 1781 (to settle Los Angeles and establish Santa Bárbara Presidio and the Channel Missions).

One of the reasons no complete lists have ever been found is that the event was so disturbing and embarrassing to the Spanish authorities that they tried to make it known only to those who had to take action. Therefore, records made at the time are frequently in conflict as to the details. It is now difficult to sort through those records and select the ones which are most correct.

The soldiers of the mission-pueblos who were killed were: Ensign Santiago Islas; Sergeant José de la Vega; Corporals: Juan Miguel Palomino; Pascuál Rivera; Soldiers: Pedro Bohórquez/Burquez; Gabriel/Javier Díaz; Manuel Duarte; Juan Gallardo; Justo Grijalva; Gabriel Luque; José Ignacio Martínez; Juan Martínez; Cayetaño Mesa; Bernardo Morales; Gabriel Romero; Faustino Sallalla/Xelaya; Matías de la Vega; and Ignacio Zamora. Those soldiers who escaped were: José Reyes Pacheco; Miguel Antonio Romero; and Pedro Solares. All or nearly all of these soldiers had families, most not now known. The priests who were killed were: Juan Barreneche; Juan Díaz; Francisco García; and Matías Moreño. The settlers who were killed were: Manuel Barragán; José Estévan; Cárlos Gallego; Justo Grijalva; Ignacio Martínez; Antonio Mendoza; José Olguín; José Antonio Romero; Juan Romero; Juan Ignacio Romero; Gabriel Tebeca; and Nicolás Villalba. Settlers who survived were: Matías de Castro; Juan José Miranda; and interpreters José Urrea and José Ignacio Bengachea. Some writers have said 101 persons were captured, but no complete lists have as yet been found of those women and children and a few men who were captured, of those later ransomed, and of those never recovered. (Ref: Bancroft, Vol 1:359, “Pueblo Missions of the Rio Colorado,” History of California.)

Those killed from the Expedition and subsequently are listed in the Archivo General de Indias, Guadalajara 517, extracted by Nadine Vásquez, and used here with her permission:

From Loreto Presidio: Captain Fernando de Rivera y Moncada. (Captain Rivera had an Indian servant named Ramón who was reported killed, but Lt Col Pedro Fages later reported him captured.)

From San Diego Presidio: Sgt Juan José Robles; Rafael Márquez.
Yuma Participants

From Monterey Presidio: Pable Victoriano Cervantes; Manuel Díaz; José Joaquín Espinosa; Antonio Pardo; and José Quijano. Francisco Xavier Castro was reported killed, but he actually escaped and was arrested 15 August at Tucson.

From Buenavista Presidio: Juan Francisco Armenta; Joaquín Díaz; Ygnacio Espinosa; Ygnacio Leiva; José Antonio Moreno; José Tapia;

From Pitic Presidio: Diego de León; Gabriel de León; Gabriel Romero; Honorato Romero; Javier Romero and his wife María Rita (The father of Francisco Javier Romero resided at Pitic and was poor. He stated his son was a soldier at Horcasitas. Archivo General de la Nación (AGN), Provincias Internas 197.)

Tucson Presidio: Ysidro Martínez. (Pedro de Allende y Saabedra, Commander of the Tucson Presidio, on 15 August 1781 arrested Francisco Xavier Castro as a deserter. AGN, Provincias Internas, 198.)

Bancroft (op cit, p 363) also shows that people killed with Captain Fernando Javier de Rivera y Moncada were: Sergeant Juan José Robles; Nicolás Beltrán; Pablo Victoriano Cervantes; Joaquín Espinosa; and Francisco Peña. Others who died during the time period, possibly in the Yuma Massacre, were Antonio Espinosa; Joaquín López; José M. Guerrero; (Ref: Bancroft, op cit, p 363. This list was taken from Provincial State Papers, Benecia Military Toma III, pp 10, 22). Bancroft also showed Carlos Gallegos killed, but other lists do not. There may have been confusion with Carlos Gallego, the settler.) Ascencio Álvarez has been listed by some as another recruit who was killed, but this has not been documented.

Shortly after the revolt, Cpl Pasquale (Bailón) Rivera and a party of nine soldiers and two settlers reached the river with supplies and livestock from San Gabriel. The whole party was killed. From the other direction two soldiers were sent from Altar to the Colorado, and they, too, disappeared. Some of these casualties are listed above from the AGI, Guadalajara 517.

In August, the news of the massacre reached San Gabriel and Ensign Cayetano Limón and eight soldiers went to determine what had happened. He reached the Colorado and left his livestock and two soldier guards among some apparently friendly Indians. He went on and found where Cpl Bailón's party had been killed, then found the ruins of Misión Concepción, with its dead bodies. His force was then attacked, but they fought off the Indians, with only his son, also named Cayetano Limón, wounded. He returned to recover his livestock but found only the dead bodies of his two soldiers, Ygnacio Leiva and Diego de León. Limón managed to get back to San Gabriel. Names of his other soldiers included, other than his son, are not known. In Feb 1782, Gov. Felipe de Neve of Alta California sent Lt José Velásquez of San Diego Presidio and 12 men with an interpreter to the area to help attack the Yumas, but they arrived too late. Names of this group have not been recovered, but it did include Sgt. Miguel Rivera y Guevara, Catalanian volunteer, and perhaps some of those listed on 24 October at San Gabriel.
Yuma Participants

Listed 24 Oct 1781 at San Gabriel without designation were 16 soldiers, possibly some from the contingent of recruits sent by Capt. Rivera y Moncada to Loreto, thence on to San Gabriel under Lt José Velásquez, and some from the Sonoran escort under Ensign Cayetano Limón. They were: Joséf Acuña; Guadalupe Álvarado; Andrés Bojórquez; Joséf Chamarro; Víctor Fraz; Diégo de León (killed at Yuma with Ensign Limón); Andrés Martínez; Joséf Domingo Mesa; Valentin Montañó; Juan de Dios Murieta; Custodio Ocha; Xavier Romero; Matéó de Soto; Juan Ygnacio Valencia; Juan de Dios Villaseñor; and Juan Joséf Xelayal. Another list showing most of the above had additional recruit names of Gaspár López; Juan Norberto Mejía; Pedro José Mejía; Javier Sepulveda; and José María Velarde. It seems most likely that these were soldiers awaiting orders at San Gabriel.

During this period of uncertainty and catastrophe, three soldiers deserted: Isidro German; Prudencio López; and Ygnacio Rochin. There is documentation that Manuela, wife of Isidro German, had been captured by the Yumas, but was later ransomed. Isidro German returned to duty and he and his wife established a family in Alta California.

The largest number of soldiers ever involved in California military operations involved two separate expeditions to subdue the Yumas. Commandante-General Teodoro de Croix appointed Lt Col Pedro Fages to lead the first Colorado River Expedition of 1781/82, with second in command Captain Pedro Tueros. Fages had just completed a successful campaign against the Seri Indians of Sonora. With him were other Catalonian Volunteers Francisco García, Antonio Noriega, Miguel Pericas, Estévan Sola, Pedro Nata Vinolas, and Agustín de Yslas. Some of these may have gone on with him to Yuma. Others mentioned by Fages in his diary were Sgt Juan Noriega of the Volunteers; Sgt Miguel Palacios of Piticc, Sgt Miguel Rivera; Sgt Gaspár Tovar; Cpl Castro of Buenavista; Sgt Juan Franco, Ensign Manuel Antonio Arbizu, 100 soldiers from the Presidios of Arizona and Sonora, 36 Pima auxiliaries, 40 Pápagos, and 20 Maricopas. On 18 Oct, this expedition rescued 48 captives, on 19 Oct, 14 captives, and 3 Dec, 7 captives. Fages mentioned as recovered captive Miguel Antonio Rivera of Buenavista, captive Ignacio (Indian), and two women, María Josefa Benítez, and María Juliana Sambrano de Altar with her newborn child. Fages also mentioned Sgt Rafael Tovar and Altar Presidio soldiers Mendivil and Gómez/Gámez. Fray Enrique Cenizo(s) was Chaplain for this Expedition.

Then, in 1781/82, Fages led a group of 38 soldiers, with 140 animals, through the Yuma country and on to San Gabriel to get help from Alta California. Ten soldiers (one a sergeant) were from Piticc and 24 were apparently from Tucson. Names of his soldiers are not known, but his interpreter was Joséf Urrea; who had escaped during the Yuma Massacre. Fages then in April 1782 returned to the Colorado with ten soldiers from Monterey and 10 from Sonora. He conferred with Capt. Romeu on a fall campaign and mentioned Sgt Moraga of Altar. He then returned to the coast via San Diego Presidio.

In the fall of 1782, Lt Col Felipe de Neve and Fages led an expedition against the Yumas from both Sonora and CA. The California group with Gov. Neve included a Lieutenant, possibly Diégó González, Ensign José Velásquez, Sgt Mariano Verdugo (from Monterey), Sgt Miguel Rivera y Guevara (Catalonian Volunteer), two corporals, and 46 privates. The Yumas withdrew from the area and there was little action. Capt. José Antonio Romeu with Sonoran forces made the final attack Oct. 3-12, and killed an unknown number, but did not subdue them. The names of the soldiers in these expeditions have not been completely recovered.

It seems quite clear that the provinces of Sonora and Nueva Vizcaya were much involved in the Yuma operations. It was in everyone's interest to keep the overland road open to California. It was also a key to the overall strategy of Minister of the Interior José Gálvez to fortify and unify the Northwestern Frontier of New Spain.

5. EXPLORING TRADE ROUTES FOR NEW MEXICO

New Mexico was the oldest and most populated of the border provinces in 1779. Originally settled with the arrival of the Oñate Colonizers in 1598, the northern portions were abolished in 1680 with the Pueblo Revolt. Refugees fled southward to the settlements near El Paso, with some continuing on to less exposed parts of New Spain. In the Vargas Reconquest of 1693, some refugees from the El Paso area returned north to their former Rio Grande homes; however, most of the 1693 settlers were a hundred gentleman soldiers from Spain, sixty-seven families from the City and Valley of Mexico, some families from Zacatecas, and descendants of those who had originally settled near El Paso. These people were small farmers and ranchers, with few large grants of land or mining claims. The people, after 175 years of isolation and forced self-sufficiency were close to being one very large extended family. Among them were people of local Indian ancestry who had become Christian and Spanish, called genizares.

When Visitor-General José de Gálvez studied the Borderland defenses of New Spain, he found New Mexico well beyond any defensive cordon he could visualize with the resources available. However, he did recognize that the people were united and cohesive, with adequate resources and willpower to defend themselves. Rather than viewing New Mexico's exposed position as a liability, he could see it as a wedge and anchor for moving the entire frontier northward from Texas to California. What Gálvez needed was a New Mexican leader who shared his strategic vision. Either he or others found their man in Lt Col Juan Bautista de Anza, Governor of Sonora and recently the successful colonizer of San Francisco Bay of Alta California. Lt Col Anza had successfully planned and carried out the two overland trips from Sonora through the California desert to Alta California. It seemed he would be the very person to take over New Mexico and unite it with Sonora, Texas, and Louisiana in moving the frontier northward. Indeed, this was so and would have been successful had not men with less understanding taken over his plans for working with the Yuma Indians at the critical Colorado River crossing area.

Lt Col de Anza entered his governorship of New Mexico with a mandate to make it self-sufficient militarily and to move its control northward and outward toward its neighboring Borderlands provinces. He set out by reorganizing internal defenses against Indian raids, and then took the offensive against the tribes who were doing the raiding. First, he took on the Comanches, who were also blocking the way to Upper Louisiana and to Texas.

He was authorized to take up to 600 persons, including troops, militia, and Indians. Including officers and men, there were to be 103 troops (from Santa Fé); 49 from the Santa Fé militia, including 6 Indians; 246 militia from the Villa de Cañada, 96 of whom were Indians; 156 militia of the Alcaldía de Los Querós, including 149 (Querós) Indians; and 33 militia of San Cárlos, including 8 (Tegua) Indians. 573 to 600 were on the expedition; and this was an excellent ratio, considering normal rates of sickness and other reasons for absence.
The Comanches had established strongholds in the Front Range of the Rockies in what is now Southern Colorado. They believed they were secure because they had never seen Spanish soldiers in the mountains that far north. Lt Col Anza surprised them by moving northward through the mountain passes and staying away from the open plains. On the way north, he was joined by 200 Utes and some friendly Apaches. He did not achieve complete surprise, but he did defeat the Comanches in two running battles and killed their war chief and several of his close associates. The Utes left de Anza and went on to kill more Comanches on their own. Anza thus broke the Comanche threat and this led to an eventual alliance between the Comanches and the Spanish of New Mexico. Lt Col de Anza was promoted to Colonel and his Lt Cordero of the Santa Fé Presidio was promoted to Captain. The names of the soldiers who took part from Santa Fé are probably included in enlistment records, but the names of the militia and Indians have not been recovered.

The next effort against the Indians was to try to bring the Moquis (Hopi) pueblos under Spanish control. The Moquis lived between the Navajos and Apaches in what is now eastern Arizona. It was known from the explorations of Fray Garcés that there was a trail from New Mexico through the Moqui country to the Colorado River. It was not usable as long as the Moquis were hostile. There had been a Moqui mission before the Pueblo Revolt, but nothing had since been accomplished. A drought had started in 1777, and the Moquis had suffered for several years. Most were starving. It was an opportune time for Anza to move. He took west a force of 126 men including 38 soldiers and 88 Indians. Fray Sebastián Fernández went along as chaplain. Fray Andrés García joined at Laguna. The Moquis offered no military resistance, but the caciques were resolved to die before submitting to Christianity and Spanish rule. Some families did accept Anza's offers of food and protection. The Moquis were never again a threat, and Anza could go on to other projects. The names of the soldiers and Indians who took part in the Moqui Expedition have not been recovered.

With some security established in New Mexico, Anza was able to continue in the overall plan to unify the Borderlands by exploring trade routes among them. He and others fully believed that the overland passage to California from Sonora was assured and that the interior provinces would benefit in trade with each other and with California. New Mexico needed trade routes with both Sonora and Texas/Louisiana in order to avoid the long, perilous trade trips from Santa Fé to Chihuahua which took place annually. The first step was to establish trade with Sonora. There had been itinerant traders who made the trip, but there was no established route.

El Cavallero Teodoro de Croix, Commandante-General of the Provincias Internas, organized the Expedition into three parts. Colonel Anza had the lead role, with a force to work from Santa Fé to Tucson. He was to be supported by a force from Sonora under Capt. Joseph Antonio Vildósola, and a second force from Nueva Vizcaya under Capt. Francisco Martínez.

Governor Anza started on 9 Nov 1780 from Santa Fé, he being authorized 60 regular troops, 55 militia, and 36 Indians. He successfully reported completion of the task on 31 Dec 1780. He did not meet his support groups while on the march. Names mentioned in his dispatches before starting were Lt Vicente Troncoso, and soldier guides Manuel Chacón and Juan Mexia of Sonora. Mexia had died, and Chacón could not be located. Names of the regular troops from Santa Fé are known, but names of the militia and Indians have not been recovered.

Captain Vildósola of Presidio Las Nutrias was authorized 31 troops from Tucson, 41 from Fronteras, 21 from the Company of Volunteers, 21 from the Pickets of Dragoons, 100 Ópapas, and 50 Upper Pimas. He actually had no Pimas and only 80 Ópapas and 116 soldiers. He was to move northeast from Sonora and try to meet Governor Anza on the march. He had numerous encounters with hostile Indians but did not meet the Governor. In his diary, he mentions actions of Lt Pablo Romero, Lt Francisco Galas, Sgt Tona, Lt Juan Antonio Carillo, Ensign Joseph Tona, and Sgt Joseph Barela of the Dragoons. Names of others have not been identified.

Capt Martínez of Carrizal was to move northwest from the El Paso area to support Governor Anza as he passed to the north through the mountains. He was authorized to take 129 persons in total, with 17 from Janos, 13 from San Elizario, 16 from San Buenaventura, 6 from Carrizal, 29 from the Fourth Company, and 48 Ópapas. He actually set out on 7 Nov from the deserted Presidio of Velarde with 40 soldiers and 20 Ópapas. He did move north and west through what is now southern New Mexico, where he had several encounters with hostile Indians, but he did not meet either of the other columns. His diary mentions Ensign Marcos de Riaño, Lt Narcísso Tapia, Ensign Manuel de Casanova, Sgt Ygnacio Escageda of San Elizario, Cpl Felipe López of Carrizal, and Lipan Apache soldier Blas de Arocha. Others who participated have not been identified.

What happened in New Mexico in 1781, 1782, and 1783 is that war activities shifted to other areas and Governor Anza had to work with no further support from the Commandante-General. He was able to pacify the Utes, Navajos, and Comanches so that there were relative peace in the province. One of the successes Anza had was in weaning the Navajos away from their cooperation with their linguistic Apache cousins on the Gila River. As a result, these Apaches could not count on falling back and resupplying from the Navajos.

After the tragedy of the Yuma Massacre, the trade route to Sonora was never developed, and New Mexico remained dependent on the annual trade trips to Chihuahua. After Governor Anza retired to Sonora, a trade route was developed with Texas, then with Natchitoches, and still later, with St. Louis.

6. ARIZONA CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE VOLUNTARY WAR FUND.

As in Alta California, the amounts of Arizona and Sonora contributions are known, but the names of individual contributors have not been recovered. The best analysis for the contributions was done by Kieran McCarty and included as Chapter 12, "Arizona's Contribution," pp 51-56, in Desert Documentary, cited below. The royal decree, requesting the donation, was issued at the Royal Palace at San Ildefonso, 17 Aug 1780, from The King:

"The insulting tyranny of the English nation has precipitated me into a war, the exorbitant cost of which has forced me to raise the revenue exacted from the provinces of our Spanish homeland by a third. I had hoped not to have to extend this burden to my loyal subjects in America, even though they would seem to be the principal target of the grasping avarice of my enemies. Nevertheless, I have always been able to count on the faithful generosity of the voluntary contributions of those vast and wealthy colonies. To make this burden as light as possible, I have resolved to ask for a donativo of one peso from every freeman who is an Indian or of mixed blood, and two pesos from every Spaniard and those of the higher class. These last may also pay for their servants and workers and later discount the amount from their salaries or daily wages.'

'Therefore, I command all of my royal officials in the Indies to announce and explain my royal decree so that all of the inhabitants of the Indies will once again have opportunity to show me their love and gratitude for the benefits I have bestowed on them. I also charge all of my church officials there to expedite this project by their persuasion and good example, for this is my will.'

'All copies of this decree, duly signed by my Secretary of State and Universal Office of the Indies, who also signs below, shall have the same force as the original.'

'Given at San Ildefonso, on this seventeenth day of August of the year seventeen hundred and eighty.' Signed by I, The King and José de Gálvez (Minister of the Indies), and certified as a copy of the original by José de Gálvez.

It took a year for the royal decree to get through the English blockade and all the bureaucratic channels and reach Commandante General Cabellero de Croix at Arispe for execution. In August, 1781, he transmitted the royal decree to each Governor, along with a list of thirteen instructions from Viceroy Martín de Mayorga for those who supervised the operation. Commissioners were to be set up for each jurisdiction, and each had to give his donors a receipt and turn in the signature of each one, showing the amount he gave, lest the accounts be pilfered. The eighth instruction forbade commissioners from using any coercion or showing any displeasure if the prospective donor gave nothing. The collections were stopped by Commandante General Felipe de Neve in January, 1784, when he learned the war with England was over. Any collections after that time were for pledges made earlier.

The final tabulations of 10 Jul 1786 showed the military personnel and settlers at the Tucson Presidio had contributed 459 pesos. The total for Sonora (including Sinaloa) was 22,420 pesos, 4 reales. The 1787 tabulation for all of New Spain showed that almost one million pesos had been collected. (McCarty noted that six to eight pesos would have, at the time, purchased an excellent riding horse. The contributions therefore made considerable dent in the war debt.)

In his royal decree, King Carlos III indicated the voluntary contributions were to defray expenses of the War with England. That was the most probable use made of the contributions, as debts from the war had to be paid.

While no lists of contributors have been found for any area, the lists of Commissioners are known for Sonora and New Mexico. Sonora Commissioners are named in Chapter 9B, pages 86-147, below.

Also below, in Chapter 8, we made a beginning effort to name all male inhabitants of Arizona who were over 18 during the war period. It seems probable that many of these persons contributed to the war fund, whether they were of Spanish, Indian, or mixed ancestry.

7. SETTLERS AND LAND OWNERS

Because of the Sonoran desert conditions, Pimería Alta (Arizona) did not offer great incentive to farmers and stock raisers. The first Spanish explorers were looking for minerals, particularly gold and silver. The Jesuit missionaries, and later the Franciscans, were looking for groups of Indians they could convert. The Presidios were established to protect the mining operations as much as the missions. After most of the easy mining sites were exploited early in the eighteenth century, some people began to consider the possibilities of farming. Certainly the Pimas and Pápago were part time farmers at the missions. The missions had, themselves, been established near former Indian rancherias, or villages, where some agriculture was practiced. The missions did introduce new crops and livestock. However, settlement before 1800 was narrowly limited to the river valleys where there was water for irrigation for crops or at least enough for livestock. Furthermore, any families which strayed far from protection of the Presidios were fair game for the present Apache raiders.

In spite of the dangers, some Spanish families settled on mission lands or lived near the Presidios. There is considerable evidence that some families were well established in the area by the time of the Pima revolt in 1751, and their taking of Pima lands may have been one of the causes for that revolt. However, there were later only small settlements of several non-Indian families at each mission and at such places as Tubac, Tucson, and Arizanc. Further south in Sonora safer settlements were growing at Arispe, Horcasitas, Hermosillo, Guaymas and Altar.

Some of the early settler names can be found among military records. Captain José Díaz del Carpio of the Terrenate Presidio had been involved in pacifying the Pima people after their 1751 uprising. Names of his descendants show up later. Captain Tomás de Beldarrain was ordered to build a Presidio at Tubac, a former Pima village, which he began in 1752. Civilians came to the Tubac area, which by 1757 had 411 residents, including the soldiers and soldier families. When Captain Beldarrain died in 1759, Captain Juan Bautista de Anza, Jr, was sent to Tubac as commander. When the garrison at Tubac in 1776 was moved to Tucson, some of the civilians moved with it. Other civilian families of upper Alta Pimería were settled near the missions, squatting on mission lands which belonged to the Indians. A few families were at Arivaca, Sopori, Tubac, Tumacácori, and Guevavi. Capt. Juan Bautista de Anza's mother was María Rosa Bezerra Nieto de Anza, so the Nieto family was present. Capt. Anza married Ana María Pérez Serrano, daughter of a wealthy merchant family of the province. When Indians were first settled in the Tucson area, Captain Francisco Elías González de Zayas of the Terrenate Presidio was in charge. He was son-in-law of Captain del Carpio. When the Jesuits were to be removed, Captain Bernardo de Urrea of Altar Presidio was assigned the task. In 1774, there were 19 Spanish individuals at Tumacácori, several descended from Juan Crisóstomo Ramírez, a former officer of the Tubac Presidio. Counting all the soldiers as Spanish, the total Hispanic population of the area for all ages was between 200 and 500.
In 1782, Bishop Antonio de los Reyes brought to the town of Alamos two nephews, one a priest José Almada, and his brother Antonio Almada. Antonio soon married Luz Alvarado González de Zayas, a daughter of the mining elite of Northwestern New Spain. Alamos was far to the south, but it does indicate that Sonora was receiving a small flow of relatives and some new people from further south or from Spain. Not so many however, wanted to live on the unsettled frontier with the ever-present threat of Apache raids.

When Tubac got its Presidio back in 1787, its commander was Pedro Villaescusa, who had married Ignacia Otero, sister of Arizona's first recorded land grant owner, Toribio de Otero. Toribio had applied for a grant in 1789, which he received. His wife, María Ignacia Salazar of Santa Ana, then joined him at his grant near Tucson. This small grant stayed in the family until the early 1940's.

By 1796, the Tucson register showed 395 individuals, 102 of whom were soldiers, and 25 were Indian servants. There were 21 civilian households, including that of former soldier Ylario Santa Cruz. Other names were Pacheco, Durán, and Ramírez. Soldier families included those of Sgt Juan Antonio Oliva, Sgt Domingo Granillo, Salvador Gallego, and Simón Maldonado (who had married widow Louisa Bohórquez, whose first husband had been Pablo Romero), Ensign José María Sosa (wife Rita Espinosa), Lt Mariano de Urrea (wife Gertrudis Elías González), and Capt. José Zuñiga (wife Loretta Ortiz).

The 1797 census for Tumacácori showed only 2 Hispanics, and all the others were Indians. The Indians always outnumbered the Hispanics, and it is probably Indian ancestry which is characteristic of those who live today and descend from persons who lived before 1800 in Pimería Alta. In 1798, the census of Arizpe showed 52 Apache captives living in 25 Spanish households. The families in charge of these captives included the names Tresierra y Caño, Pérez, Escalante, Tato, Momadurán, Corella, Elías González, Pesqueira, Zubiria, and Morales. The Apache captives may have received or adopted these family names.

Tumacácori Governor Juan Legarra, a Papago in his late thirties, began in 1806 to seek a land grant for the Indians who lived there. This grant became known as the Tumacácori-Calabasas grant, and was authorized 2 Apr 1807. It extended from north of Tumacácori up the Santa Cruz River to Calabasas in a narrow band called the fundo legal (four sitios) for growing crops, then from Calabasas to Guevavi in a broader band called the estancia, for cattle herding. What the Indians got included 6770 acres. Those involved in the grant request included Legarra; Felipe Méndez, a Pima, age 53; José Domingo Arriola, Pima, twenty-seven; Ramón Pamplona, a young Papago/Yaqui listed as a Pima; Javier Ignacio Medina, still fourteen; and Fray Narciso Gutiérrez. Attorney Ignacio Díaz del Carpio drew up the plan and presented it to intendant-governor, García Conde, who ordered magistrate Manuel de León to survey the appropriate lands. Ensign León found three witnesses who could attest to the rights of the Indians to the land and took depositions from Juan Nepomuceno Apodaca of Santa Cruz; Sgt. Juan Bautista Romero of the Tucson garrison; and Pedro Baes of Tucson. He then selected a survey crew of witnesses Toribio de Otero and Juan Nepomuceno Gonzáles; chainmen (measurers) Lorenzo Berdugo of Tumacácori, José Miguel Sotomayor and Juan Estéban Romero, both of Tubac; and recorders León Osorio and Ramón Ríos. They used piles of stone as markers for the limits of the survey. Licenciado Alonso Tresierra y Caño was asked to verify legality of the proceedings. This was done and the grant was issued 2 April 1807. In 1841, Francisco González of Ímuris, a grantee of Los Nogales de Elías south and west of Tumacácori, asked the Indians if he could borrow the land grant documents so he could "learn the boundaries." That is the last the Indians saw of their land documents, and they never again had title. The documents were traded among various people who capitalized on the land. Without their knowledge, on 18 Apr 1844, the entire Tumacácori grant was sold at public auction in Guaymas, a town far to the south, for 500 pesos. The bidder was Francisco Alejandro Aguilá, brother in law to Manuel María Gandara. In 1898, the U. S. Supreme Court ruled that the sale to Aguilá was illegal, and that the Indians had abandoned the land, making it revert to public domain. (The Pima Pamplano family and some of their kin, all rightful owners, still lived on the land at the time of the Supreme Court decision.)

In 1812, while living at Tucson, Agustín Ortiz applied for a grant to the site of Arivaca. His family moved to the ranch and lived there for several generations. His sons, Tomáš and Ignacio, confirmed the Arivaca grant in 1833.

After Mexican Independence, there were several early grants. The first was known as San Ignacio de la Canoa, made to sons of Agustín Ortiz, Tomáš and Ignacio. This estancia grant of 17,000 acres north of Tubac was made in 1821 by Governor/Intendente Antonio Cordero. Those involved in the survey were Commander Elías of Tubac, Lt Manuel de León, José Antonio Figueroa, Juan José Orosco, and Manuel Castro. During the litigation, Fray Juan Vano of San Xavier tried to outbid the applicants and obtain the land for the Mission's livestock. Tomáš had in the meantime married a daughter of Tubac Commander, Captain Ignacio Elías González.

The San José de Sonóita grant was made to León Herreros, who applied in 1821 and received title in May 1825 from Commissary General of Mexico for the State of the West, Miguel Riesgo. Sonóita had been a visita of Tumacácori until 1773, when it had been abandoned. Herreros held the land until 1831, when he sold it to Joaquín Vicente Elías.

In 1821, the San Pedro grant for 4 sitios was initiated by Don José de Jesús Pérez and it was surveyed from a place called San Pedro in 1821. (A sitio was a square league, and contained 4,338.464 acres.) The land was sold to Pérez in 1822 by Governor Cordero, but no title was issued. In 1832, Ignacio Pérez, on behalf of his brother José, petitioned the treasurer general for the land. Shortly afterwards, Pérez sold his rights to Rafael Elías, who received title in 1833 from Treasurer-General Mendoza.

Lt Ignacio Pérez in 1822 received a grant of 73,240 acres which he developed as the San Bernardino Ranch. Its location was astride the international border, in what is now Cochise County, 18 miles east of Douglas, AZ. The Pérez family lost the ranch before 1884.

The San Rafael de la Zanja grant was made to Santa Cruz resident Manuel Bustillo and other shareholders 15 May 1825. It was located north of the presidio of Santa Cruz in the San Rafael Valley.

Between 1826 and 1831, there were five more grants. Francisco José de Juvera/Tuvera, a citizen of Arizpe, applied in behalf of his wife Doña Josefa Morales for the abandoned ranch of Buenavista, originally the home of the Nicolás Romero family, which lay along the Santa Cruz River south of the Guevavi Mission. His widow, Josefa Morales, received 4 sitios in 1831 from Treasurer-General José Mendoza. This grant was also called María Santísima del Carmen.

Capt. Ignacio Elías González and Nepomuceno Félix applied for a grant in 1827 for land on both sides of the San Pedro River between St David and Charleston in Cochise County. Fairbanks is close to the center of this grant of 4 sitios, which they called the San Juan de las Boquillas y Nogales. Treasurer-General Mendoza of Sonora made the grant in 1833.

In May 1827, Joaquín Elías, as agent for his brother Rafael, asked for 4 sitios upstream of that requested by Ignacio. He received this grant, called San Rafael del Vallé, in Sep 1832.

Another Ignacio Elías González, brother to Rafael, with his sister, Eulalia, in 1827 asked for 8 sitios along Babocómari Creek from Elgin to the San Pedro River. This grant was issued in 1832 and was called the San Ignacio del Babocómari rancho. This land was mostly in the present state of Arizona.

In 1831, Rafael, Juan, and Ignacio Elías filed for several tracts of land known as Agua Prieto, Naidenibabachi, Coaguyna, and Santa Bárbara. Vicente Elías was appointed to make the survey, and the grant was made in 1836. It seems from the descriptions that these tracts were adjacent to land the Elías family members already owned.

The largest grant, known as the Tres Alamos grant, was made in 1831 for 58 sitios to Leonardo Escalénte, acting governor of Sonora, and 8 promoters (empresarios) to stimulate occupation and development along the lower San Pedro from north of the San Juan de las Boquillas y Nogalles grant to the Gila River and stretching eastward to the New Mexico border. The other promoters were Doña María Pérez Ortiz, Doña María Guadalupe Escalénte Narbóna, Manuel Narbóna, Antonio Pascuál Narbóna, Miguel Bustaménte, José Desidero Veldásola, José Escalénte, and Rafael Escalénte. Unfortunately, little development resulted from this grant.

In 1838, the El Sopori grant on a creek tributary of the Santa Cruz River was made to Joaquín Astizaran of Horcasitas. It was probably never occupied.
In 1838, a part of the Otero Ranch was purchased by a retired soldier from Tubac, José María Martínez, from the Tubac Justice of the Peace Don Trinidad Yrigoyen. Later Apache raids in 1848 forced Martínez to take refuge at the San Xavier mission. While at the mission in 1851, Martínez requested and was issued land which was part of the San Xavier Mission. Before issuing it, the Justice of the Peace called in the mission Indians, who gave permission. This act established that the San Xavier Pueblo Indians owned the land, and that their ownership was so recognized under Mexican law. This was the precedent for their later U.S. claims to their land, for which they had no specific documentary evidence. (Each presidio and pueblo was allowed 4 sitios to be allocated for use to individual families for their sustenance.)

In 1838, the El Paso de Los Algodones grant to Fernando Rodríguez of Hermosillo was for land on the south side of the Gila River to its junction with the Colorado. This land was never occupied and rights were sold in 1845 to Juan A. Robinson of Guaymas. The grant was held invalid by the U.S. Supreme Court because it had been issued by Sonora after Mexican states could no longer issue such grants.

An 1841 grant was made for Los Nogales de Elías to José Elías González and his parents, Don Francisco González and Doña Babinera Redondo, in Sonora southeast of Nogales. It was a result of this grant that the Tumacácori Indians loaned their land documents to González, so he could "learn the boundaries." González kept the documents and later used them to his advantage.

Another grant mentioned by some was Baca Float Number 3, but its description has not been found.

It is clear that the soldiers listed for the Tubac and Tucson Presidios during the War with England did not become big ranch owners. To get a grant required considerable knowhow and political connections, plus enough cash to purchase the land. The grants went to a relatively small number of well-connected families, and the grants were far too late for the soldier veterans. This group of grantee families may have made voluntary contributions for the War with England, but no records for individual contributions have been found for Sonora or Pimería Alta.

Members of the Francisco Elías González family of suitable age to be Patriots during the 1779-1783 War with England include Francisco Elías González de Zaya himself (???, 1790), married to María Francisca Ignacia Díaz del Carpio; his son Fernando Elías González (1741-1793), married to Leonor Ortiz Corella; his son José Francisco Antonio Elías González (1742-1816), married to María Rita Dolores Romo de Vivar; his son Simón ??? - 1790), married to Rosa Escalante Herrera; son-in-law Ignacio Ascarate, married to his daughter María Isabel; son-in-law Francisco Díaz de Moradillas, married to his daughter Juana María Rita; associate José Comadurán, married to María Robins; and associate Juan José Ramírez (1753-1816), married to Manuela Sosa.

Families of other land holders have not been studied.

A. ARIZONA PATRIOTS AND NEAR PATRIOTS.

A consolidated list of Arizona/Pimería Alta patriots (and probable patriots) follows with notations on the origins of the information. The patriots were the soldiers who fought in the numerous engagements, settlers who died, escaped, or were captured at Yuma, civilian militia called up for duty, Indian auxiliaries who served under Spanish officers, the Franciscan priests who prayed for success of Spain over England, New Mexico and Nueva Vizcaya soldiers who were in the 1780/81 Sonora Expedition, and citizens who contributed to the fund for paying the expenses of the war. The presentation which follows lists all probable patriots, with asterisks by those who have been confirmed. As more is learned about each of these persons, it may be that some were too young, that some died before 1779, and others neither served nor contributed. An asterisk is shown for those confirmed to be patriots and the designation + is shown for those known to have married or had children. A number such as 11b means the reference shown at the end on page 64, ahead.

Male persons from the census of 1801, reference 1 lc above, age 36 or over, could have contributed to the fund to defray expenses of the War with England. Some may even have served in the military as regular soldiers, Indian scouts, or as militia. Some may have moved later into the part of Pimería Alta we now call Arizona. Those known to have had children are shown with a +. Those where the spelling is uncertain or unreadable, a question mark is shown. It appears that for this census, the term mulato/mulata was used for mestizo/mestiza, the offspring of Spanish and Indian.

9. OTHER BORDERLANDS SOLDIERS AND CITIZENS SUPPORTING ARIZONA

A. SOLDIERS OF THE PROVINCIAS INTERNAS WHO MAY HAVE SERVED DURING SPAIN’S 1779-1783 WAR WITH ENGLAND

Catalogo XXII del Archivo de Simancas, entitled Secretaría de Guerra (Siglo XVIII), Hojas de Servicios de America, published in 1958 at Valladolid, Spain, with index in Spanish by Ricardo Magdaleno, lists many of those who served during Spain's 1779-1783 War with England and who stayed in service after the war. Most of the listings are for the 1790 decade, but some are for the 1780 period and a few are after 1800. They show the officers and key non-commissioned officers for each company, Presidio, or other unit. Less than five percent of enlisted men in service are shown, mostly those who later reached officer rank. All ranks are abbreviated. The equivalent of Alférez is Ensign. Those names with an asterisk are confirmed to have had wartime service.

The installations which were involved in Provincias Internas operations included those of California, Sonora, New Mexico, Nueva Vizcaya, Coahuila; Nuevo León, Nuevo Santander, and Texas. Alta and Baja California included Presidios at Loreto, San Diego, Santa Bárbara, Monterey, and San Francisco. There was also an infantry unit protecting the Port of San Blas, which supplied the Californias. This unit was designated the Compañía de Infantería Veterana Fija, and will be referred to herein as San Blas.

Sonora (Son.) included the southern part of Arizona, present day Sonora, and present day Sinaloa, geographically the Sonoran Desert and its plateaus. The Presidios included Pimas de Tubac, referred to herein as Tubac; San Agustín de Tucson, referred to as Tucson; Ópata de Bacoachi, referred to as Bacoachi; Ópata de Bavispe, referred to as Bavispe; San Bernardino de Fronteras, referred to as Fronteras; San Carlos de Buenavista, referred to as Buenavista; San Miguel de Horcasitas, referred to as Horcasitas; San Rafael de Buenavista Pimas, referred to as Buenavista; Santa Cruz de Terrenate, referred to as Terrenate; and Santa Gertrudis de Altar, referred to as Altar. The First Free Company of Catalonian Volunteers spent some time in Sonora fighting Seris and Yumas, but it does not seem to have been stationed there. A company or detachment of Dragoons was also stationed at Arispe for some time.

In New Mexico (NM), the only Presidio consistently under that Province's control was Santa Fe. Likewise, Texas had only two Presidios under its control: Bahía del Espíritu Santo, located at Goliad, referred to as Bahía; and San Antonio de Béjar, referred to as Béjar. Nueva Vizcaya (N. Viz.) held the area from El Paso south, and most of its forces were constantly in support of frontier operations. Geographically, it held the great central plateau called the Chihuahuan desert. Its Presidios were: El Carrizal, referred to as Carrizal; Janos; El Norte; Príncipe; San Elizario, referred to as Elizario; and San Buenaventura, referred to as Buenaventura; and San Carlos de Cerro Gordo, referred to as Cerro Gordo. In addition, its defense was bolstered by the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Flying Companies. One Flying Company was at San Carlos de Parras, referred to... as Parras, and the soldiers were called Provincial Dragoons. There was also a Second Company of Volunteers, possibly Catalonians.

In the eastern part of Northern Mexico on the coastal plain were the Provinces of Coahuila (Coah.), Nuevo León (N. León), and Nuevo Santander (N. Sant.), more or less protected by the buffer Province of Texas (TX). Or put another way, they were the support for Texas. Coahuila had the Presidios on or near the Río Grande of Aguaverde, Río Grande, and Babia. Nuevo León had Monclova and Monterrey, and San Juan Bautista de la Punta de Lampazos, referred to herein as Lampazos. Nuevo Santander relied on its First, Second, and Third Flying Companies.

It must be noted that some of the Presidios and flying companies did not exist during Spain's 1779-1783 War with England; however, the officers and key soldiers who moved to these new units were veterans who had served on the frontier in other units. The complete service records are on microfilm which must be translated to show where each served and for how long. The format used is name, rank, unit, legajo (record bundle number), section, and page. The legajos are listed on page 85, along with the LDS films which contain them. Some names below have additional information in parentheses, with references from other sections.

(These records are handwritten in old Spanish without translations. They are very hard to use without the index by Magdaleno.)

B. OTHER PATRIOTS AND NEAR PATRIOTS ASSOCIATED WITH THE PROVINCIAS INTERNAS OF NEW SPAIN BUT WHO DID NOT SERVE IN CA, AZ, NM, OR TX, AND WHO ARE NOT ON THE LIST OF SPANISH ARMY KEY PERSONNEL ABOVE.

References:

1. Noel M. Loomis, "Commandantes-General of the Interior Provinces: A Preliminary List," Arizona and the West, vol 11 (Autumn, 1969). The Commandantes-General were generally the most successful military leaders or the most politically astute. They are listed on nearly all the correspondence which has been preserved for their periods. Even at the end of the period of Spanish rule, most of the Commandantes-General were old enough to have served during Spain's 1779-1783 War with England.

5. Kieman McCarty, Desert Documentary in his chapter 12, "Arizona's Contribution," pages 51-56, gives the amounts of voluntary contributions to the War Fund, as reported by the local commissioners.

8. Ricardo Magdaleno, Titulos de Indias: Catalogo XX del Archivo General de Simancas, Valladolid, Spain, 1954. This catalog lists the persons employed by the Spanish government in America, and whose records can be found in the Archives at Simancas, Spain. The Provincias Internas were under the Audencia de Guadalajara, New Spain. Many of the persons mentioned in correspondence below are in this catalog, and their exact office can be identified.

The majority of the references are microfilm copies of originals in various archives in Mexico. These microfilm copies, now held by the University of Arizona in Tucson, were made more accessible with extracts made by Los Descendientes, Tucson, AZ. The records cover both military and supporting civil activities. The extracts are for persons and subjects of interest from Presidios at Tucson, Tubac, Terrenate, Fronteras, Altar, and Arispe. The Janos files are in two parts, and the first is designated J, with the file number and year. The second Janos file is designated J. Tucson is designated T, Tubac as Tu, Fronteras as F, Arispe as A, Terrenate as Te, and Altar as Al.

The files used generally covered the period, 1775-1795. The intent was to determine those persons serving in the army or making contributions during the 1779-1783 time period. Those persons are given an asterisk. Others may also have been active during the war period but did not show up on the records. Some key people were listed dozens or hundreds of times, while others were found only once. The records used were as follows:

Those listed with an asterisk are believed to have been patriots. Those in wartime correspondence, or who were mentioned both before and after the war, are given an asterisk. However, more study of the correspondence may indicate that some of those with the asterisk were actually already deceased. Also, some with an asterisk may have contributed nothing or may not have had service which was suitable. The term, "patriots and near patriots," thus indicates that anyone with possible ancestry to them must furnish confirming documentation for their service.

REFERENCES FOR DESCENDANTS OF SPANISH SOLDIERS WHO SERVED IN ARIZONA AND THE SPANISH BORDERLANDS DURING SPAIN'S 1779-1783 WAR WITH ENGLAND

A. TEN MOST USEFUL REFERENCES

2. Hubert H. Bancroft, vol I, History of California, San Francisco, CA, The History Company, 1886. This volume includes an incomplete list of the settlers and soldiers who died at Yuma during the July 17-21 massacre.

3. Henry F. Dobyns, Spanish Colonial Tucson: A Demographic History, Tucson, AZ, University of Arizona Press, 1978. This book includes wartime rosters of the Tucson Presidio, and will almost certainly be used by most soldier descendants as a reference. It also contains the Tubac Troop list for 1775, the San Xavier Padrone for 1801, and other account and garrison lists for Tucson.

5. Magdaleno, Ricardo. Catalogo XXII del Archivo de Simancas, entitled Secretaria de Guerra (Siglo XVIII) Hojas de Servicios de America, Valladolid, Spain, Patronato Nacional de Archivos Historicos, 1958. This Spanish book indexes those officers and key non-commissioned officers who served in New Spain during the late 1780-1800 era. Of interest are those who served in the Spanish Borderlands. The index shows the location of the detailed service records, which are then available from the LDS.

6 Mattison, Ray H. "Early Spanish and Mexican Settlements in Arizona," New Mexico Historical Review, XXI, No. 4 (Oct 1946), pp 273-327. This study includes Tubac, Tucson, and individual land grants.

7. Kieran McCarty, Desert Documentary: The Spanish Years, 1767-1821, Arizona Historical Society, 1976. This book contains references to several soldiers not included in Dobyns' work. It also has a listing of the known contributors to the voluntary fund to defray expenses of the war.

8. Mark Santiago, Massacre at the Yuma Crossing: Spanish Relations with the Quechans, 1779-1782, Tucson, University of Arizona Press, 1998. This book gives the most complete listing of participants in the Yuma Operations yet to be found.

10. University of Arizona, Tucson. The library has microfilm copies of records held in various archives in Mexico and Spain. Those records dealing with the Borderlands Presidios and other matters of interest have been extracted by Los Decendientes, showing subjects, names, and places.

B. OTHER ARIZONA REFERENCES

Archivo General de Indias, Sevilla (AGI), holding in microfilm in some universities. Guadalupe 284. "Plan que manifesta el numero de Vasallos ..." is the reference for the 1783 census for Sonora, which showed 46,077 people. This census was prepared by Caballero Teodoro de Croix and included Alta Pimeria. There were six Presidios, two in Alta Pimeria, Tubac and Tucson. The Tucson copies have not been recovered.

Burrus, Ernest J. "Rivera y Moncada, Explorer and Military Commander of Both Californias, in the Light of His Diary and Other Contemporary Documents," Hispanic
mentioned many other colonists rather than those known to have come to the Californias; however, this would be normal in a recruitment and selection process. Some would have decided against going to California, while others would have been turned down because Rivera found they were not suitable. People on Rivera's lists who actually got to California are very well recorded, so the Burrus suggestion that there were many other California settlers seems untenable.

Legajos 7270 a 7279, "Hojas de Servicio, Militares de America, Nueva Espana," in LDS film rolls 1156334 through 1156342. They include more than ten percent of all persons who served because, through the years, privates moved up through the ranks to become sergeants and officers. Almost everyone, except the young cadets, who is listed began service by 1783. There is a surname index by Ricardo Magdaleno in the LDS Library, Salt Lake City, for these legajos in the book, Catalogo XXII del Archivo de Simancas, Secretaria de Guerra (Siglo XVIII), Hojas de Servicios de America. This index, which is also available through interlibrary loan, includes the full name of the soldier, rank or position, name of regiment, year record was made, legajo number, section, and page. The index covers North and South America and the Philippines.

11. EPILOGUE

Our original intent was to develop the Borderlands Patriots' story in three parts, with California in two parts and the rest of the Borderlands in a single part. This proved impractical because of the distinctly different histories of the regions of the Southwest and South. This third part covers Arizona, the fourth part will cover New Mexico, the fifth part Texas, and the sixth part Louisiana and East and West Florida.

Our expansions for California are found in Chapter 4, "Yuma Participants," (pages 23-29) and in Chapter 9, "Other Borderlands Soldiers and Citizens Supporting Arizona;" (pages 73-147). Nadine Vásquez and Mark Santiago contributed most to making the Yuma participant list more complete. Lynne Urias of Los Descendientes helped us immensely by lending us diskettes on the Presidios of Tucson, Tubac, Altar, Arispe, Janos, Fronteras, and Terrenate. These diskettes gave us documentary evidence about supporting military and civilian personnel for the entire Northwestern Frontier. However, we were not able to identify rosters for the Terrenate Presidio while it was on Arizona soil near Tombstone, 1776-1780, nor for the re-established Tubac Presidio, manned by Pimas and Papagos after 1783. Still, we have produced the most complete compilation ever made of persons involved with Arizona in the 1779-83 time period.

Our goal is to gain recognition by national patriotic societies and government agencies of the contributions of Spanish soldiers to gaining and holding territory in trust for the United States. The National Society, Sons of the American Revolution (NSSAR), at its March, 1999, Board Meeting decided to consider applications, each on its own merits, from descendants of Spanish soldiers and citizens of the Borderlands. Actually, this is much the same approach as that taken for any application from a descendant of a Patriot soldier of the English Colonies.

While preparing this third part of our study, we learned that the NSSAR has been accepting two categories of Texas descendants, though there has been little publicity about it. The descendants of Spanish soldiers at San Antonio have been accepted, and descendants of those who drove cattle from Texas to Louisiana to support Governor Bernardo Gálvez have been accepted. Of course, descendants of soldiers or sailors who fought under Governor Gálvez in Louisiana have been accepted since 1925. The NSSAR began accepting California soldier descendants in March, '98. At the present time, one application from New Mexico is pending. No applications have been made based on Arizona soldiers.

We encourage descendants of Arizona soldiers to apply for SAR membership. The South Coast, California, SAR Chapter web site is http://home.earthlink.net/~wiggles/ SAR information is available on this site, and one can learn about ongoing chapter activities. Forms can be downloaded from the web site. Descendants can also contact the authors at 3438 Bahia Blanca West, Apt. B, Laguna Hills, CA 92653-2830 for information on Arizona SAR or DAR chapters.
